our drive - your success

One step ahead.

Vulganus Oy has decided not to launch new products on website

Vulganus Oy has throughout its history of more than 30 years laid a great emphasis on product development and reached remarkable results in this area. In our product development projects, we always work in close cooperation with our customers and other partners.

We are continuously able to bring new products to the market – solutions that bring added value to our customers' products, i.e. through improving our customers' process hygiene and making their processes altogether more profitable.

However, we wish to keep these new developments between us and our customers, and this is the reason why we have decided not to publish our newest product developments for example on our websites. One of the reasons for this decision is, unfortunately, increased plagiarism on the market.

Vulganus Oy will continue with considerable investments its product development work. Many others on the market have chosen not to do so, and we have noted that some companies focus on copying others' innovations. We have seen that within a very short period of time, another company has introduced our innovation as their own. In these cases it has been crystal clear that our products have been copied up to every single detail, without any room for interpretation.

In conclusion, we have decided to rather introduce the results of our product development straight to our customers. Naturally, it is always very fruitful to discuss each customer's own process and optimal solutions to it. So please do not hesitate to contact us directly for further discussions!
